

Pastoral Life in the Colony of Belize.

On the eastern frontier of Guatemala, in British Honduras, there is a stretch of beautiful country very rarely visited. It is one thousand one hundred and fifty feet above the level of the sea, there is lovely park-like scenery, with bubbling springs and grassy hills, where herds of cattle graze all day long. Years ago that place was the site of a great empire; here and there foundations of massive stone walls rise out of the ground, mementos of bygone splendor, while every surrounding hill has its legend.

The present inhabitants, descendants of the great Maya nation, lead a life of pastoral simplicity, tending their flocks and only cultivating the ground enough to support their actual wants. Intoxicating liquor is not allowed among them, while vice and crime are almost unknown. The largest village, Santo Toribio, has about fifteen hundred inhabitants and is called the capital. The government of Guatemala seldom interferes with these villages, the district being regarded as unimportant Indian territory, but each village annually elects its own Alcalde.

Election day is celebrated with much rejoicing, just as it used to be before Europeans came to America. The Spanish chroniclers tell us that it was then customary for those going out of office to give a banquet to their successors, and at the present time the authorities of those villages always spread a banquet on election day. The entire feast is placed on the table at once, except the tortillas. Fresh supplies of these are brought, steaming hot, to the table every few minutes. Only men take part in this feast of the politicians, and boys wait on them. In the evening the hall is cleared for dancing, then the women and girls appear. They are dressed in loose, white cotton garments, trimmed with colored embroidery and have bright-colored scarves around their shoulders. But seems to be their idea of elegance. Each has several very full skirts, all stiffly starched. Their gold ornaments, earrings, necklaces, and finger-rings are very numerous, made from ore found in their native soil. Some of the girls are beautiful, though all are short in stature like the men. The musical instrument most used by these people is the marimba, played after the manner of a dulcimer, but made of wood and pieces of hide. The tones of the marimba are plaintive, sweet, and melodious. It can be heard a long distance in the still night air.

The women sit round the room, but the men stand in groups. When the dancing is to commence one of them only advances to the middle of the floor and nods at the woman he desires for a partner. She leaves her seat and goes to face him, standing a few feet off. They perform a jig, hardly moving their body, though the steps are varied and rapid; occasionally they exchange places, but they never clasp hands. Without even looking at her partner the woman returns to her seat when the fancy takes her, and he, without changing his position, invites some one else by a nod, for he is expected to remain on foot till the music ceases. Then another takes his place; so dancing is kept up till midnight, all conducting themselves with the greatest decorum, but merry peals of laughter are heard now and again, and everyone seems perfectly happy, chatting gaily as they wind their way homeward in the soft moonlight.—Home Journal.

Attending to the Business.

Millionaire—Your husband will be home in an hour or so, you think?

Mrs. Winkle—Yes; is it anything I can attend to?

"No; you see he understands the kind of business I am interested in in Omaha, and as I am going abroad for a long time, perhaps for years, I wanted to make some arrangement to take him into partnership so that he will look after it."

"That would be nice."

"Yes; I will give him a high salary, and only want a few hundred by way of security, you know."

"I'm sorry, but he can't furnish that."

"Oh, I guess so."

"Impossible! I wanted some more money to go shopping this very morning, and he said we'd be in the poor-house inside of a week. Good day, sir."

Green at the Business.

A young man, whose name graces the pages of our city directory, and who has already found Hymen's delicate chain of flowers sufficiently irksome to make a high old time with the boys now and then a treat to be anticipated with keen pleasure, recently returned home to his faithful, and we may also add wakeful, spouse so near daybreak that you might call it early in the morning.

"My dear, how late you are to-night! Where in the world have you been?"

Was the greeting he received from his bright-eyed wife as he shuffled up stairs.

"Late? (hic) 'Tisn't late. What maketh you (hic) shink 'alate?"

"Why, the chickens are cawing. Don't you hear them?"

"Shick's? Shyring (hic) shick's. They don't (hic) know what chime 'tis."

Criminals and Their Keepers.

I visited once a large city prison where the inmates, convicts and those awaiting trial, were huddled together in an unsavory crowd, guarded by keepers whose manners and evident moral status were so like those of the prisoners that the two classes might have changed places without exciting the suspicion of the spectator. The prisoners, by their bad conduct, had elected themselves to their situation; the keepers had been elected or appointed to their places probably for dubious political services. Bad as these prisoners appeared to be, I do not think it was fair for the state to subject them to further deterioration by placing them in charge of such keepers.

"ONLY AFTER DEATH."

What Wonders the Microscope Has Done for Us.

No Longer Obligated to Die to Find Out "What's Killing Us."

One of the leading scientific publications states that many people are now using the microscope to discover the real cause of disease in the system, and to detect adulterations of food and medicines. This wonderful instrument has saved many a life. A microscopic test shows, for instance, the presence of albumen, or the life of the blood, in certain derangements of the kidneys, and the doctor can tell us how far advanced the derangement is, or whether it shall prove fatal.

The microscope, however, gives us this knowledge. Bright's disease, which so many people dread, was not fully known until the microscope revealed its characteristics. It greatly benefited the physician skilled in its use, determining how far disease has advanced, and giving a fuller idea of the true structure of the kidneys.

A German scholar recently discovered that by the aid of the microscope, the physician can tell if there is a tumor forming in the system, and if certain appearances are seen in the fluids passed, it is proof positive that the tumor is to be a malignant one.

If any derangement of the kidneys is detected by the microscope, the physician looks for the development of almost any disease; the system is in peril, and any indication of Bright's disease, which has no symptoms of its own and cannot be fully recognized except by the microscope, he looks upon with alarm. This disease has existed for more than 2,000 years. It is only until recently that the microscope has revealed to us its universal prevalence and fatal character. Persons who formerly died of what was called general debility, nervous break-down, dropsy, paralysis, heart disease, rheumatism, apoplexy, etc., are now known to have really died of kidney disease, and the chances are that the effects from which they died would never have existed.

As the world becomes better acquainted with the importance of the kidneys in the human economy by the aid of the microscope, there is greater alarm spread through the communities concerning it, and this accounts for the erroneous belief that it is on the increase.

As yet neither homoeopathic nor allopathic is prepared with a cure for deranged kidneys, but the world has long since recognized, and many medical gentlemen also recognize and prescribe Warner's safe cure for these derangements, and admit that it is the only specific for the common and advanced forms of kidney diseases.

Formerly the cause of death was discovered only after death. To-day the microscope shows us, in the water we pass, the dangerous condition of any organ in the body, thus enabling us to treat it promptly and escape premature death.

As the microscope in the hands of laymen has revealed many diseases that the medical men were not aware of, so that preparation, like many other discoveries in medicine and science, was found out by laymen outside the medical code; consequently it comes very hard for medical men to endorse and prescribe it. Nevertheless, Warner's safe cure has come to grow in popularity, and the evidences of its effectiveness are seen on every hand.

Some persons claim that the proprietors could give the medical profession the formulae of the remedy, if it is such a "drag-up-down" feeling, the back-ache, you are debilitated, you have pains of various kinds. Take Dr. H. V. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" and be cured. Price reduced to one dollar. By druggists.

Before the Havana Cathedral.

One short block from the Plaza di Armas finds us within the large open square in front of the grand cathedral of Havana. In all the streets through which we had heretofore passed, the sidewalks were so narrow that two people could not walk abreast, but here, before the church, they were wide and completely thronged with devotees seeking their shrine to worship. We paused to view the scene and the faces of the passers-by; old and young, rich and poor, all mingled in one company; carriage after carriage rolled up to the broad stone steps and deposited its freight; ladies richly dressed in the wretched Spanish costume, short skirts, scarce long enough to conceal the arching ancles and well-rounded ankles, the long sweeping veil of black lace, which forms the only head covering of ladies of quality, and the fan—the inseparable fan. Shoes and stockings would be dispensed with before the fan. All were hurrying through the open portals of this temple of worship.—Havana Cor. Boston Courier.

DR. MORSE, physician at Marine Hospital, Baltimore, Md., found Red Star Cough Cure a harmless and most effective remedy in the cure of coughs. He recommends it especially for children, who are irritable and obstinate, as pleasant to take and prompt in its effect. Price, twenty-five cents.

The Spread of Measles.

Dr. James B. Taylor, Chief of the Bureau of Contagious Diseases of New York, says that the alarming spread of the measles is due to a widespread belief among parents that measles are harmless, and that it is better for their children to have the measles when they are young. Holding this theory, the doctor says parents do not make any effort when one of their children is attacked with the disease to isolate the child, but permit the others to go near and probably sleep with it. In this way the other children not only contract the disease themselves, but carry it to school or among their mates and thus give it to others. The great danger to be feared from measles in cold weather, the doctor says, is that it may lead to bronchitis or pneumonia and thus prove fatal.

"A most extraordinary and absolute cure for rheumatism and other bodily ailments is St. Jacobs Oil," says Hon. James Harlan, ex-Vice Chancellor, Louisville, Ky.

Down in Honduras.

Honduras Congressmen are paid $5 a day while in active service, and they can only override Gen. Bogran's veto by a two-thirds vote. The standing army of Honduras is 3,000 men, but every man from 15 to 25 is a soldier and compelled to drill in his village every Sunday morning. This brings the troops available up to 43,000 men, well drilled and armed with Remington rifles. The artillery of the army is not much of an establishment. It consists of six batteries of breech-loading field pieces and eighteen Gatling guns. The navy is just a trifle behind that of the United States. It is a single man-of-war, iron, built in England, and carries four Krupp guns of small caliber. It carries a crew of eighty-five and is named the Morazan.

The Model Husband.

The model husband does not assume that he is a pattern man, that he is all wise, and that his word must be law, but recognizes the married state as a republic wherein each is entitled to an opinion and the expression of it, and where each will regard the wishes of the other.

Women in Music.

Much has been written lately regarding the reason why there are no great female composers. There can be no doubt that, in other arts besides music, women have achieved but little that can lay claim to immortal fame. Perhaps the principal reason of this is that their affections are too exclusively personal. A girl would assiduously practice on the piano as long as that will assist her in fascinating her suitors. But how many women outside the ranks of teachers continue their practice after marriage for the impersonal love of music itself? Needless to say they have no time; for every hour devoted to emotional refreshment strengthens the nerves for two hours of extra labor.

No doubt there is something comic in the ardent affection with which a professor hugs his pet theory regarding the Greek dative, or the origin of honey in flowers, and in the ferocity with which he will defend it against his friends, if they happen to oppose it. But such complete devotion to abstract theories is absolutely necessary to the discovery of original ideas; and as women are rarely able or willing to emerge from the haunts of personal emotion, this explains why they have achieved greatness in hardly any art but novel writing, which is chiefly concerned with personal emotions. Among great performers, on the other hand, there are as many talented women as men, if not more. But it is a curious fact that even the best lady pianists seldom learn to improvise in an interesting manner. A malicious bachelor has suggested that if, in teaching harmony, the chords were made personal by calling them "Charlie" and "William" instead of "tonic" and "dominant," women would soon learn to improvise charmingly.—American Musician.

Disorders Which Affect the Kidneys.

Are among the most formidable known. Diabetes, Bright's disease, gravel, and other complaints of the urinary organs, are not ordinarily cured in severe cases, but they may be averted by timely medication. A useful stimulant of the urinary glands has been found in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a medicine which not only affords the requisite stimulus when they become inactive, but increases their vigor and secretory power. By increasing the activity of the kidneys and bladder, this medicine has the additional effect of expelling from the blood impurities which it is the peculiar office of those organs to eliminate and pass off. The Bitters is also a purifier and strengthener of the bowels, an invigorant of the stomach, and a matchless remedy for biliousness and fever and ague. It counteracts a tendency to premature decay, and sustains and comforts the aged and infirm.

Good Detective Work.

The discovery and punishment of the express robbers who made a large haul upon the Missouri Pacific Railroad, near St. Louis, was one of the best pieces of detective work of late years. The crime and its detection have been made the occasion for one of the best stories of the day, which will be commenced in the Chicago Ledger of April 13 and be continued for several months. The author of the novel is Edmond C. Strong, who will be remembered by readers of that paper as the writer of "Manacle and Bracelet," which was immensely popular. The Ledger is only $1.50 per year. A sample copy of the paper, containing the opening chapters of this great story, will be sent any one sending name and address to the Ledger Company, 271 Franklin street, Chicago, before the date of beginning of the story.
